Lease of Land for Senior Housing, Traffic Studies Asked of Council

by Diane Oberg

At its September 11 regular meeting, the Greenbelt City Council agreed to survey voters' opinions on the desirability of leasing, at nominal cost, several acres of city parkland for construction of a senior citizen apartment project. Council also agreed to seek cost estimates for conducting traffic counts at critical intersections in Greenbelt East, received several petitions related to traffic and election procedures, and gave final approval to legislation raising councilmembers' pay.

Senior Housing

At the request of the Senior Housing Committee of the Greenbelt Consumer Cooperative, council unanimously agreed to put a question on the election questionnaire to determine whether voters will support leasing, for $1 per year, 2.5 to 3 acres of city land to a cooperative corporation. This corporation would construct a 100-unit senior citizen apartment building on the property. The committee would like to lease Parcel 12, located across the service road from St. Hugh's school, next to the lake park. The committee's second choice is Parcel 2, across from the GHI offices. This last property was recently purchased with proceeds from the 1985 bond issue.

The committee first discussed the proposed housing project with council in February 1986, requesting use of Parcel 12. At that time the council members made it clear that the site was unacceptable. In November of last year the committee again met with council. this time requesting use of part of the North End School site. Since the city is negotiating with the school board to exchange it for Center School, this property is no longer available. The school system plans to build a new elementary school on the North End site.

City Manager James K. Giese opposed the new request, regardless of location. In his written comments he raised two concerns. The first was the idea of permitting private use of public land at nominal cost. He noted that when public land is made available for construction, it is generally used for low-income housing. The co-op proposal would not be limited to low-income tenants.

Secondly, Giese was concerned about the effect of allowing construction of an apartment building on open space at the same time that the city is seeking help from other levels of government to finance the purchase of Parcel 1. In addition, legal problems may occur if the project were built on Parcel 2, which was purchased with bond funds. Since bond monies were not authorized for this use, Giese said that he would have to seek the advice of the city's bond counsel. Although the questionnaire will not bind the city to any course of action, Giese felt that raising the possibility on an official city document could jeopardize the city's attempt to obtain funds.

Jim Cassels, representing the committee, reminded council that the citizens overwhelmingly approved the referendum authorizing the construction of Green Ridge House. He argued that the original plan for Greenbelt called for the city to own all the surrounding land and that it is not only possible but desirable for the city to acquire land for purposes other than parks. Cassels said that Giese's objections could be overcome by having the voters decide. He did not think that posing the question would jeopardize the city's fundraising efforts.

Senior Housing Committee member Ben Rosenzweig told council that the city must "give serious consideration to the social problems involved in taking care of the senior citizens who are taxpayers and voters and have participated in the community for half a century. . . ." He noted that council had received a plan to clear up to 15 acres of parkland for ballfields and argued that if council is "concerned about ballfields and recreation areas, they'd better damn sight give some serious thought to paying attention to senior citizen requirements."

Traffic

Council directed staff to obtain cost estimates updating traffic counts at four intersections in Greenbelt East. The coalition of Greenbelt East Communities requested the counts because of concerns about the "reliability and timeliness" of developer-prepared traffic studies.

City Planning and Development Coordinator Celia Wilson was skeptical that the counts would be useful in fighting development proposals. Instead, she suggested that the city could make better use of its money by having its engineer review developer studies. She noted that a traffic study incorporates many assumptions beyond the basic counts which may be just as important as the actual counts. In addition, she and City Solicitor Robert Manzi pointed out that developers' counts can be compared with data from other sources, particularly from the State Highway Administration.

Council member Edward Putens argued that counts are needed to give the city a base from which to evaluate developer proposals. He pointed out that he had asked for a citywide traffic study and that staff had been directed to study critical intersections in the city. Wilson said that the study data had been collected but not yet put together. Counts, however, had not been taken. Instead, the staff studied the morning, evening and lunchtime peaks to identify the problem movements and times.

Roy Dahl noted that the traffic counts do not include traffic from new construction further down Greenbelt Road. He suggested that traffic counts be taken over several days and subjected to statistical analysis. Wilson said that county regulations limit the amount of "background" traffic that must be included in developers' traffic studies.

Putens questioned the accuracy of the traffic generation rates used by the county. He said that the county estimates 1.5 vehicles per house, while he knows of a household with six cars. Giese agreed that many valid questions surround county procedures, but that performing a traffic study would not resolve them.

Manzi noted that reform would require changes to county legislation. rather than merely changes in rules and regulations. He suggested that if council were serious about seeking reform, they should meet with County County Member Richard Castaldi and the Park and Planning staff to update the traffic generation estimates. Council accepted Giese's suggestion that they first meet with the city's traffic engineer to learn more about what changes are and are not feasible.

Petitions

Council received three petitions relating to traffic and parking. One, with 153 signatures, requested the city to convert Parkway to a one-lane, one-way street. This would permit angled, nose-in parking on the even-address side of the street. Although Giese questioned the petitioners estimates that this would provide 57 additional parking spaces, he said, in his written comments, that the request deserved consideration.

The second petition, from the Woodland Hills Community Association, requested that the city consider placing a stop sign at the intersection of Northway and Woodland Way and consider converting Northway to a one-way street between Woodland Way and Hillside Road. In addition, the petitioners requested increased enforcement of speed limits in the area and emphasis to the drivers of city-owned vehicles that they must obey the posted speed limit.

Don Shell requested that the city investigate ways to improve traffic and pedestrian safety in

by Dorrie Bates, 345-5961

We all were saddened to hear of the death of Robert McKean, principal of Greenbelt Middle School. For over six years he has shared his time and talents with students, faculty and friends. He will be missed.

Mary Linstrom has had two wonderful visits from her sons recently. David Linstrom stopped in at his mother's on 11 Court Ridge after spending time in Baltimore, working on the new TV show 911 which was filming on location there. David is a sound technician with the show.

Christopher Linstrom also visited home recently, having just been admitted as a Fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons, (Canada). The entrance process was quite rigorous, according to his proud mother. Next on the docket for young Dr. Linstrom is a three-month trip to South Africa where he will lecture and perform surgery at the Medical Institute of South Africa Hospital in Pretoria. He will also be travelling throughout the area before returning to practice medicine in New York.

And last, but not least, we're glad to report that Mary Lou Williamson, our editor, is at home, recovering nicely but not necessarily quietly, from surgery. Friends, fans and Greenbelt at large wish her well.

Lake Level Lowered

Recent visitors to the "Buddy" Attick Lake Park have noticed the lake water level has been lowered six to eight feet. This was done deliberately by the city as the very first step of the process of cleaning up the lake. The lower water level allowed companies interested in doing the project to see what will be involved. The city opened bids for the project last Friday. A decision will be made by the city council at its next regular meeting on Tuesday, October 10 on whether to accept any of the bids.

According to Assistant City Manager Michael McLaughlin, the lake level will be allowed to rise again. It will later be lowered when work begins. The lake level dropped more than had been expected or desired, he said.

Late last year the city council decided to clean up the lake by improving water quality of the lake and taking care of the silt accumulation in the lake. The neccessary approval of the project by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers then took awhile to obtain.

Back to School Night

Greenbelt East. He noted that a youth had been struck earlier this year while attempting to cross Greenbelt Road near Roosevelt High School. He said that there is no indication to Greenbelt Road motorists that the school is there. He suggested that the speed limit be reduced and a flashing light installed. In addition, the school might begin educational programs for students and hire someone to supervise students outside and direct them to the light at Mandan Road. Schell also requested additional attention to pedestrian safety on Hanover Parkway near the school. The petition was referred to staff for comment.

Council also received a pair of requests for questions to be placed on the election questionnaire for voters in November. Tony Pisano wanted to measure support for a law limiting council members to no more than three consecutive terms on council. He said that prolonged service causes stagnation. Keith Chernikoff requested a question on electing council by a mixture of at-large and district voting, along with a possible increase in the size of council. Neither of the requested questions were placed on the survey when council considered the questionnaire later in the meeting. Putens made a motion to include the questions which died for lack of a second. Mayor Gil Weidenfeld and Mayor Pro Tem Joseph Isaacs felt the questionnaire was not an appropriate forum for such questions, but supported a review of all election-related questions, with Weidenfeld supporting a public meeting on the topic.

Legislation

Council gave final approval to an ordinance increasing annual pay to $5,000 for council members and $6,000 for the mayor. This increase will not take effect until after the November election.

Because of uncertainties about the owner's plans for Roosevelt Center, council deferred action on legislation introduced at its last meeting that would ask the state to designate the center as eligible for low interest rehabilitation loans.

An ordinance establishing a Community Center Task Force was given final approval. The eleven-member group will include representatives of the Advisory Planning Board, the Park and Recreation Advisory Board, the Community Relations Advisory Board, the Arts Advisory Committee and the Senior Citizen Task Force, along with six citizen members. It will be charged with developing guidelines for the conversion of Center School for use as a community center.

Under the terms of an ordinance introduced for first reading, the city, on a trial basis, will convert to a two-year budget cycle in place of the current annual budget procedure. Council will continue to adopt a budget resolution each year, but the second year review would consist only of revisions to the original budget plan. The proposed ordinance would also establish procedures for the annual adoption of a Capital Improvements Program. Prior to final adoption of this ordinance, Council will discuss it at a work session tentatively scheduled for October 16.

Arts Policy

Council approved the arts policy developed by the Arts Advisory Committee. The policy was based upon a draft policy recommended by Parks and Recreation Advisory Board task force. The new policy calls for establishment of a single arts center encompassing the performing, visual and literary arts. The PRAB task force has recommended two separate centers with the performing arts housed at Utopia Theater or some other facility.

The new arts policy sets a number of policy goals for the city, including (1) establishing a variety of arts opportunities for citizens, (2) making Greenbelt a recognized cultural center, (3) ensuring funding for arts organizations and programs and (4) advancing these goals through effective planning and use of resources.

The October 2 regular meeting was rescheduled for Tuesday, October 10 and the October 16 meeting postponed to October 30. The November 6 regular meeting was canceled.

JOE'S TIPS OF THE WEEK

Hello Again:

Almost all of the cars we drive today have electronic ignition systems. These systems are the most reliable ever engineered. Because these systems have a lower failure rate than older systems, we tend to forget them.

Because electronic components are solid state and are non-adjustable, they have an increased lifetime. The problems with these components are heat and oil contamination or component destruction due to breakage.

Case in point: we recently had the opportunity to diagnose a non-start type of failure. The first thing to consider is the electronic ignition. After normal diagnostic testing and component testing the problem was located. After removing the distributor, replacing and installing components, and adjusting ignition timing, the engine ran better than ever.

Some problems are not so easy to diagnose and correct. Consider an undetermined problem: This will drive a good electronic diagnostician nuts!

The fact of the matter is that the distributor is no longer being used: computer electronics are now being added to all later model vehicles and are controlled by computer. This new system is being used more and more in each major automotive manufacturing line.

Till next time
